WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

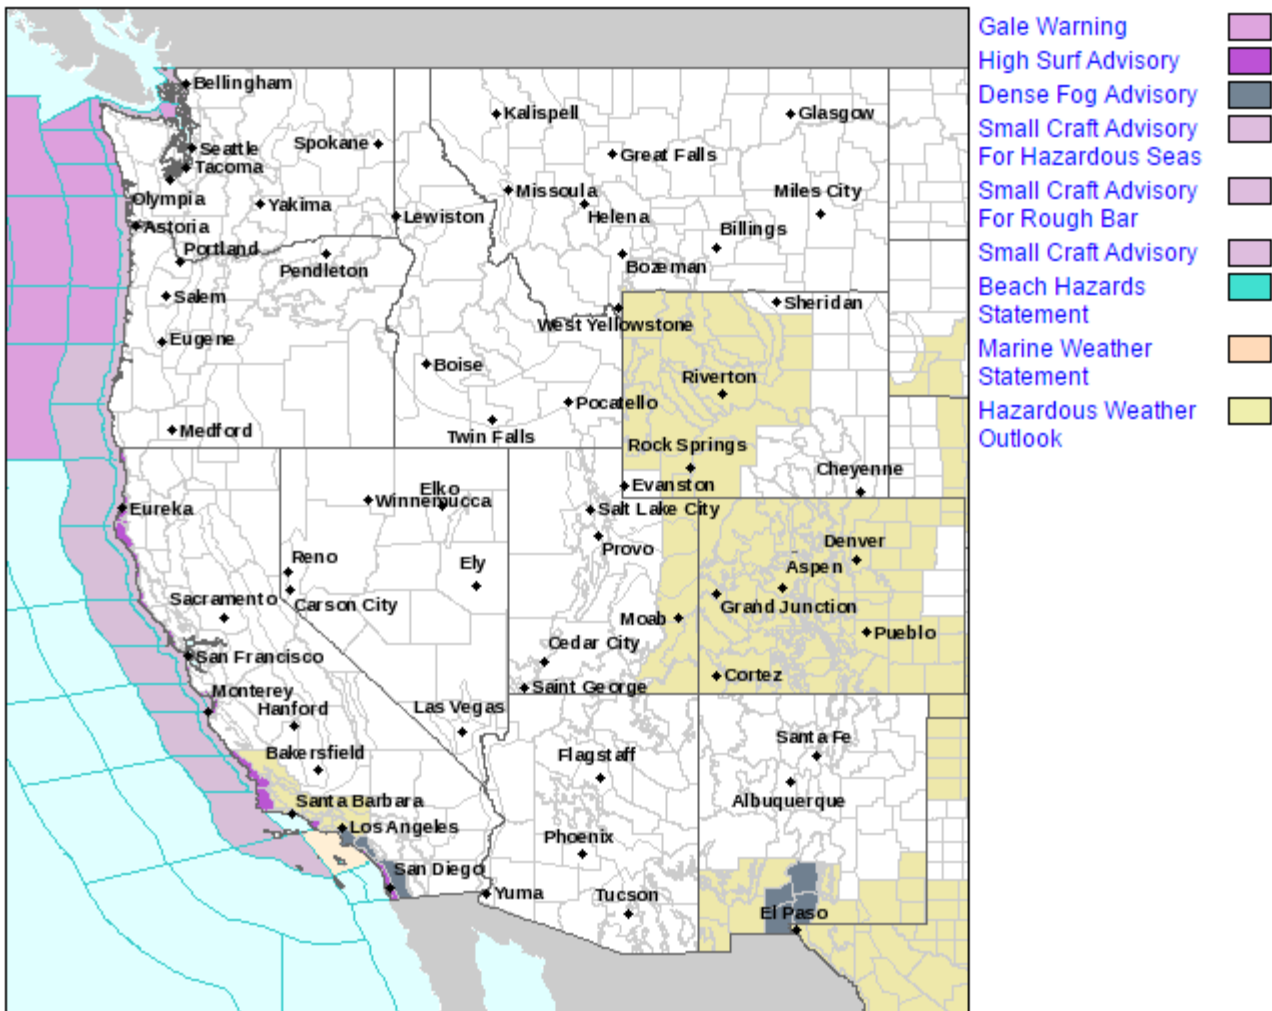

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Rain in the North Coast will taper off to showers this morning. Additional chances for rainfall are in store for much of the upcoming week. However, the week will also feature dry periods as well. Winds may become breezy over higher elevations today, but minimal negative impacts expected.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The strong ridge of high pressure that was over California will weaken bringing a slow cooling trend to Southern California this weekend. Maximum temperatures will be in the upper 50s and 60s across the mountains and 70s to low 80s in the valleys today. The ridge of high pressure over California will become strong once again Monday through the end of next week causing temperatures to be 10 to 15 degrees above normal. Local east winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Tuesday morning through Thursday morning. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 15% and 30% away from the coast and Central Valley through the end of next week.
